SPAM ALERT: DECEPTION HAPPENS

Ottawa (ON) – Just as dating deception runs rampant on the internet, so does internet spam deception. E-DATINGEXPERTS.COM issues a warning about spam artists and impostors. At approximately 1:29 pm, Wednesday, July 28th, it was discovered that SPAM artists sent bogus emails posing as the “e-datingexperts.com team”, possibly with harmful virus attachments. If you receive the following email, DO NOT OPEN ATTACHMENTS. This email does NOT originate from e-datingExperts.com.

The bogus email letter states... Subject: Status

Dear user of e-datingexperts.com, Mail system administrator of e-datingexperts.com would like to inform you

Your account has been used to send a huge amount of unsolicited email during the last week. Most likely your computer was compromised and now contains a trojaned proxy server.

Please follow our instruction in the attached file in order to keep your computer safe.

Have a nice day,
The e-datingexperts.com team

It is common for internet spammers and hackers to assume company identities and send official looking letters with harmful attachments. Sometimes this tactic is used to sabotage a website in an attempt to shut it down. Unfortunately, there is nothing that can be done to prevent this abuse as it does not occur within our system.

PLEASE BE ADVISED:

- E-datingExperts.com NEVER SENDS ATTACHMENTS unless specifically requested and addressed to one of our members.
- E-datingExperts.com does not believe in SPAM and NEVER SELLS OR SHARES CONTACT LISTS with third parties. Our mailing lists are secure and member information is private.
- E-datingExperts.com does take every precaution, including double opt-in for mailing lists to avoid spamming accusations and abuse.
- E-datingExperts.com immediately reports abuses to our internet service providers, and internet authorities to investigate.
